Miriam shut out of Supreme Court

Choices are Pangniban, Puno, Quisumbing

By Marivic N. Pison and Juliet Salting-Jarabon

A HIGH-POWERED CONSTITUTIONAL BODY yesterday slammed the door on moves to push forward Sen. Miriam Defensor Santiago as next Supreme Court Chief Justice.

Writing 1-2, the Justices and the Grand Council (GC) quashed a bid by Santiago's supporters to renom-inate her for the post of Chief Justice. The Justices said the move was "incompatible with the Constitution."

The GC, created by the 1987 Constitution, is the highest judicial body in the Philippines. It is composed of the Chief Justice, the Associate Justices, and the Grand Justices. The GC is responsible for the administration of the judiciary and the discipline of judges. The GC also has the power to recommend the appointment and removal of judges. The GC is a permanent body and its members are elected by the Senate for a term of six years.

RP needs P1.4B to ensure supply of drugs vs bird flu

By Delator V. Espares

THE PHILIPPINES WILL NEED around P1.4 billion to ensure a steady supply of anti-flu medicines in the event that the much-feared bird flu pandemic hits the country, according to Health Secretary Francisco Duque III.

The amount is just enough to cover the needs of 1 percent of the population, or 1.6 million of the 160-million Filipinos, he said in a press conference yesterday.

But Duque said it was not wise to spend that amount solely for the purchase of medicines.

The Philippines is one of only three countries in Southeast Asia still free from the virus. The others are Singapore and Brunei.

"We were just spent P1.4 billion there (in buying drugs) and initially we consider the other two," Duque told reporters. "We should explore the way we spend our limited resources as every effort."

The Department of Agriculture, a key member of the National Avian Influenza Task Force along with the Department of Health, earlier proposed a P1.5-billion budget against bird flu for next year.

In the case of the DCG, Duque said officials were working to limited resources to cover other important areas in the strategy against bird flu such as the spreading of hospitals and the purchase of personal hygiene.

Duque said the government would also spend a hefty amount to buy raw materials for the local production of Oseltamivir (Tamiflu).

Health Undersecretary Rosendo Padilla said representatives from drug company Bristol-Myers Squibb were in Manila to shop for "raw materials" to have imported for Oseltamivir.

Officials are preparing to monitor the virus within the anti-flu drug, following a notification from the Intellectual Property Rights Office that Bristol-Myers Squibb has no patent in the Philippines.

"Tamiflu has no patent here in the Philippines and essentially we can manufacture it here," Duque said.

"But our problem is the technology of the raw materials."

Duque said the raw materials to be purchased from India were expected to cost more now that other countries were also seeking to locally manufacture the medicine.

"There are indications that the cost will continue to escalate as many more countries have expressed their desire to get this product," he said.

Drug company GlaxoSmithKline has volunteered to keep a stock of Oseltamivir, an anti-flu drug, good for 10,000 cases, he said.

"We going to be given for free in case of an outbreak," he said.

Ex-employees sue ABS-CBN before NLRC

By Janessa Asing

FORMER EMPLOYEES AND EMPLOYERS OF the ABS-CBN Broadcasting Corp. have filed suits of legal dismissal against the broadcast giant before National Labor Relations Commission and demanded that they be reinstated.

In their complaints filed in the last few three months, the wronged employees accused the management of ABS-CBN of illegal termination and breach of contract.

ABS-CBN responded about 250 employees, including editors and senior technicians and radio reporters, starting in August.

Wille Delgado Jr. and Tara Devine-Cita, former reporters of ABS-CBN's RMM Radyo Patrol, and former desk editor of ABS-CBN TV News Joy Balon were the latest to file their complaints before the NLRC.

Natural respondents were ABS-CBN chief executive officer (CEO) Lopez, president Maria Cecilia Lopez and vice president for Manila Radio Division Peter Mungai.

In the complaints they filed on Wednesday, they also demanded that the company reinstate them and pay them back wages and other benefits.

ABS-CBN, however, declined to comment on the labor cases.

News and affairs officer Maria Reyes said the company has yet to receive copies of the complaints.

It would be recalled that when they were dismissed, the reporters and other employees accepted an early retirement package.

The fact that they signed the deal meant they had no objection to their being dismissed and that they were willing to be compensated accordingly, one ABS-CBN executive pointed out.

ABS-CBN learned that suits were filed by former ABS-CBN TV reporters Marcelino Prada and Marcel Castro and news department administrative officer Belia Ong were progressing in favor of the complainants.

Because of this development, other dismissed reporters and employees are planning to file their own labor cases. One former reporter said about 50 are expected to file their complaints in the next few days.

Former ABS-CBN TV and radio reporters interviewed by the inquirer said they doubt the reasons claimed by management in terminating them — that the company's profits was going down as contracting investments had to be liquidated.

They said that ABS-CBN, a publicly-listed company, has revealed that even if its revenues have been shrinking, the latter were still "in positive territory."

The former employees blamed company policies behind the termination. Redundancy was the common reason cited for the dismissal.

However, the inquirer was told that some of those involved, such as cameramen, were of fixed salaries paid from 100 to a contractual basis.

Mild quake hits South

A MEDIUM QUAKE measuring 5.5 on the Richter scale shook Mindanao, sending hit across no known casualties or damage, seismologists said.

A possible occurrence of the offshore Philippine fault may have triggered the quake that was recorded at 12:11 p.m., said the Philippine Institute of Volcanology and Seismology.

The epicenter was traced at sea, about 155 kms south of Zamboanga City. The movement was felt on the southern coast of Mindanao, which reported no casualties or damage.

Earthquakes measuring between 5.5 and 6.0 on the Richter scale have the potential to inflict light damage to buildings and other structures. AP

Greenpeace seeks rights probe

By Blanche S. Reyes

ENVIRONMENTAL ACTIVIST group Greenpeace yesterday filed a complaint before the Commission on Human Rights against the state-run Manila power plant whose guards beat up a Greenpeace volunteer during a protest against dirty energy sources last weekend.

Greenpeace asked the CHR to investigate Manila's coal plant's security personnel for the "brutal attack" on Greenpeace German volunteer Jens Lorenz and four others, including a New Zealander and three Filipinos.

"Greenpeace respectfully attacks that the disproportionate and very violent reaction to the peaceful protest was not only unreasonable and unjustified but also violation of law and human rights," Greenpeace criticized. Theodor is said in the four-page complaint letter submitted to CHR chief Petillo (submitted yesterday).

The international advocacy group also asked the CHR to institute in its inquiry members of the Philippine National Police in Manila case who detained 12 members of Greenpeace, including foreigners, without charges.

The volunteers had gone to the Manila police station to seek help for Lorenz but were instead detained. Police did not file a charge against them until eight hours later, when they charged them with "other forms of trespassing."

Greenpeace staged a rally outside the coal-fired power plant operated by the National Power Corp. on Nov. 10, protesting the planned expansion of the plant, which supplies power to the entire Luzon, including Metro Manila.

During the protest, Lorenz was cornered by the plant's private security and ended up being hit with a metal crow bar on his head. He was taken to the Jesus Gordon Hospital in Solita. Four others were injured after being pelted with stones.

In its complaint, Greenpeace said Manila's security personnel pointed guns at the volunteers and fired shots in the air to scare them away.

Greenpeace has condemned the Manila incident as the worst attack on the group in the Philippines.

"We are requesting the Commission effective and immediate investigation on the matter by initiating an inquiry to ensure that those responsible for this deplorable attack on peaceful activists are taken to task for their actions," Greenpeace Southeast Asia campaign director Max Hernandez said in a statement.

Greenpeace said the response's "swift measures" of the Philippine and Asian coal industry, which have been blamed for the pollution that causes climate change.

The group also criticized funding organizations like the Asian Development Bank (ADB) and the Japan Bank for International Cooperation for contributing to future fossil fuel-based plants despite their commitment to support new and renewable energy sources.

"By proceeding as this, we were not only violating our rights to protest peacefully but also asserting our rights to live in a safe and healthy environment," Hernandez said.

CO₂ levels highest in 650,000 years

Global warming finding is strong proof of man's interference in climate

Editor Lawrence B. Gelles

PARIS—LEVELS OF CARBON dioxide, the principal gas that drives global warming, are now 27 percent higher than at any point in the last 650,000 years, according to research into Antarctic ice cores published on Thursday.

The study, which provides evidence of human interference in the climate system, appears in the first of a key new journal on climate change, Nature. The evidence comes from the world's deepest ice core, drilled at a site called Dome C in Antarctica (see p. 10).

Analysis of carbon dioxide trapped in tiny bubbles in the ice revealed that atmospheric CO₂ levels during the last ice age had been 10 percent lower than today's levels, and that atmospheric CO₂ concentrations of around 280 parts per million (ppm) were typical in the last ice age.

The Dome C core, recovered by the European Deep Ice Project for the Centre for Global Change Research, contains 750,000 years of ice. The first 100,000 years of the core, which is now being drilled at an Antarctic site called Dome C, are now being drilled at an Antarctic site called Dome C.

China confirms 2nd bird flu death

BEIJING—CHINA HAS CONFIRMED a second death from bird flu. The victim, a 64-year-old peasant farmer, died on Saturday.

A new outbreak of the disease, which is also known as H5N1, was confirmed in the southern province of Guangdong, where it was first reported in October.

The health ministry confirmed a 15-year-old peasant farmer committed suicide after developing fever and pneumonia. The patient's condition, which was initially thought to be a common flu, worsened and led to his death.

Second China chemical plant blast forces thousands to flee

BILDERG—A CHEMICAL PLANT EXPLOSION in southern China has left thousands of people injured and thousands of people fleeing their homes, state media reported.

The explosion occurred around 10 a.m. Thursday at the Yantai chemical plant in Guangdong province's Dongguan municipality. Dongguan is a city in southern China.

One hundred workers died and more than 10,000 residents fled their homes from the plant site, state media reported, saying that the explosion was the worst in the history of the plant since its founding in 1958.

The report quoted a safety production official as saying the explosion happened as workers were mixing liquid chemicals in a container.

The blast explosion toppled near large quantities of flammable materials and ignited oil in a nearby tank, the report said.

After a loud bang, a massive white cloud billowed from the site and the smell was choking, the newspaper said, quoting a local resident.

Thousands of residents in the area fled their homes and sought refuge in nearby schools and public squares.

Guangdong and Guangdong's neighboring provinces, as well as local safety authorities and the county government, are trying to contain what is called the worst chemical accident in the history of the province.

The factory did not have a valid safety production license, the China Business News reported.

Thousand's of residents fled their homes and sought refuge in nearby schools and public squares.

HARBIN, CHINA—MILLIONS OF RESIDENTS in China's Harbin city today were left without running water Friday due to a major chemical spill, as the government worked frantically to clean up the pollution.

Harbin's metropolitan area of 3 million people is the largest city in the northeast and is a major industrial hub. The city is located along the Heilong River, which flows northward through the city.

While the government tried to reassure residents, it also warned them to stay indoors and avoid drinking water. The city government said it was working to contain the spill and prevent it from spreading.

Millions of bottles of water were being distributed to residents in the city. The government said it was working to contain the spill and prevent it from spreading.

The spill occurred after an explosion at the Harbin Chemical Plant, which is located in the city's northeast. The plant is one of the largest chemical plants in China. The explosion was caused by a leak in a storage tank.

The Harbin government officials said the spill was not a major environmental disaster. They said the spill was contained and that the water supply was not affected.

South Korea's edge in human cloning to survive ethics scandal, experts say SEOUL—SOUTH KOREA'S EDGE in stem cell research has been blunted but will survive cloning pioneer Hwang Woo-suk's admission of ethical irregularities, according to experts here.

Hwang admitted Thursday that he had covered up the fact that researchers in his team had donated their own eggs to research that produced the world's first cloned human embryo for generating stem cells.

Taking responsibility for ethical violations, he stepped down from all official posts including the chairmanship of a new research body, the World Stem Cell Hub, established only last month by the government.

The hub is intended to attract worldwide expertise to Seoul and serve as a source of stem cell lines for research in various world-wide.

Those plans are now in doubt.

Hwang's mea culpa before the media on Thursday was triggered by news that Gerald Schatten, a prominent researcher at the University of Pittsburgh, had ended a 10-month collaboration with the South Korean stem cell pioneer.

Under internationally accepted medical ethics standards, researchers are warned against meeting on their own members of their own research team because they are considered to be in a dependent relationship and vulnerable to pressure.

However, South Korea's Ministry of Health and Welfare said Hwang had done nothing wrong, either ethically or legally, and no coercion took place, citing an ethics report by a review board at Seoul National University to which Hwang's team is affiliated.

More significantly perhaps, the government said it would continue to back Hwang with generous financial aid for his own research and the hub project.

However, Hwang and his co-researchers acknowledge that the hub project is essentially a collaborative effort and could be seriously hurt if overseas experts in biomedical science decide to shun South Korea.

"The episode dealt a blow to South Korean stem cell research at a critical time when they need support and unity for the ground-breaking study," said Prof. Yong Il Kwon, biotechnology expert at Stockholm National University.

"Trust in the research team has been damaged and the international hub for stem cell research has as well," said the JoongAng Daily's leading newspaper.

However, cardiologist Lee Jeong-pil, a member of Hwang's team, said foreign researchers would come back once the dust had settled and more was known about the scandal.

"This matter is about credibility and after the matter has been cleared up... I believe everyone will come back and join the research again," he said. AP

No receipt, no taxi fare hike—LTFRB

By Cristina S. Babilas

STARTING NEXT YEAR, 700 drivers should start issuing receipts to their passengers in line with a long-pending regulation that had already been deferred several times.

If they do not comply with the law, they will face a fine of at least P1,000. The Land Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board (LTFRB) approved a provision to allow the law to take effect on Jan. 1, 2011, but the agency has not yet issued the necessary rules to change the law. "We have not yet issued the necessary rules to change the law," LTFRB Chairman Carlos M. Dela Cruz said.

Delacruz said that the LTFRB has not yet issued the necessary rules to change the law. "We have not yet issued the necessary rules to change the law," Delacruz said.

Imports jump 7.8% in Sept.

High oil prices push '05 bill up

By Michelle V. Flores

THE COUNTRY'S MERCHANDISE imports registered a 7.8-percent increase in September from a year-ago level due largely to the steep rise in oil prices.

The National Statistics Office (NSO) yesterday reported that imports in September reached $4.114 billion, or $267 million high, or close the $3.847 billion recorded in the same month last year.

The National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA), lead agency of the NSO, noted that Dubai crude, the benchmark used in setting domestic oil prices, jumped by at least 60 percent to $36.54 per barrel during the month from only $22.55 per barrel in September last year.

"The high oil prices in September largely had to do with a rise in imports. I think the decline in oil prices (seen in the past few weeks) is only a correction. We have previous to that trend," said Jonathan Tanaka, chief market strategist at BNP Paribas.

Imports of mineral fuels, lubricants and other related materials jumped 86 percent to $157.64 million from last year's $84.71 million, NSO data showed.

The NSO also reported that electronics imports, composed mostly of raw materials for electronics products intended for export, dropped by 7.3 percent year-on-year to only

Call center industry boosts demand for office space

By Kenneth W. Domingos

OFFICE SPACE DEMAND A ROSE BY 7.4 percent, while vacancy rates went down 3.4 percent in the third quarter, largely due to the continued growth of the call center and business process outsourcing industries.

According to real estate services firm CB Richard Ellis, overall demand for office space was not expected to plateau in the near future, especially in Metro Manila.

Key Builders, CBRE Philippines developed for corporate services, said total new office premium or Grade A Subclass A space increased to 15.5M in the second quarter. In Origo Center, PwC Citycenter space breaks up to 15.5M square meters.

"Given the low vacancy rates and the lack of built-out corporate office space in prime Grade A buildings and available lands on which to build on especially, call centers and BPOs with large space needs are increasingly forced to move to alternative rental business districts."

Just got LA'd

NO. SUPERHERO: Look to Los Carlos Bruch.
Malibu www.loscarlosbruch.com

A SEACREST HERE, A SNIP-see there. On any given day, Los Angeles is one business-gone highway filled with Hollywood bobos, bad diets and humans who liberally pepper their speech with the words "rad," "radical" and "groovy." Yeah, LA is all that and a bag of baked Lay's chips. But then again, it's way bland.

I recently decided to take time in the L.A. Coast, home of Lindsay Lohan's romances, and in search to seek those pop-critique groups, but to reconnect with some of my old, dis/track school classmates and other folks I played Nintendo or Xboxed with back in the
